SECRETARY OF WAR NOW IN PARIS TO GAIN FIRST HAND INFORMATION.

IMPORTANT INSPECTION

Voyage Was Uneventful and Very Quiet—Newspapers Knew He Was on His Way Many Days Ago.

Secretary of War Baker, the first American cabinet officer to visit Europe in an official capacity since the United States entered the war, is now in France for conferences with General Pershing and inspection of the American troops and positions they occupy on fronts between Soissons and Alsace. The secretary's mission is purely military and has no diplomatic significance.

On board an American cruiser, Secretary Baker and his party eluded German submarines and arrived yesterday at a French port and presently departed for Paris. After a few days in the French capital, where he probably will meet President Poincaré and Premier Clemenceau, the secretary will visit American troops in the field.

Increased activity, especially artillery, on the western front, has not yet resulted in any determined attacks by either of the opposing forces. The British are more active on the British front, in Flanders the British have driven the enemy from part of the trenches taken several days ago.

There was a general understanding among press representatives here, no announcement should be published until the war department announced his arrival.

That announcement was authorized at 11 o'clock Sunday night by the committee on public information. Secretary Baker is accompanied by Major Gen. Black, chief of engineers of the army; Lieut. Col. M. L. Brett and Ralph Hagan, private secretary of the secretary of war.

Trotsky Dismissed By Bolsheviks The Result Of Quarrel

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] London, March 11.—Leon Trotsky was dismissed as Bolshevik foreign minister by Premier Lenin, owing to a quarrel over German peace terms, according to a dispatch to the Morning Post dated Saturday. Trotsky held that the peace terms had been extorted by force and no law recognized promises made under duress as obligatory; therefore he is reported to have said it was Russia's duty to fight only guerrilla warfare. Premier Lenin, on the other hand, held the treaty must be ratified, carried out under the order that the various treaties do not necessarily annihilate nations, as Prussia has proved several times.

IS UNSINKABLE TRANSPORT TO BE SCIENCE'S ANSWER TO U-BOAT? WORLD WILL SOON KNOW

One of converted German liners (Vaterland) to be made unsinkable and William L. Saunders, Rear Admiral Winterhalter who will test out theory (lower left) and Secretary of Navy Daniels.

Rear Admiral Albert G. Winterhalter and a special committee of engineers are soon to report to Secretary of the Navy Daniels the performance of the first of the unsinkable ships heralded by Vice Chairman William L. Saunders of the naval consulting board. The investigators are taking the former Austrian steamer Lucia, fitted with the compartments calculated to render it unsinkable, from New Orleans to New York. They will subject it to severe tests en route. If it withstands the tests the Vaterland, now known as the Leviathan, and a dozen other transformed German ships, now transports, will be equipped so as to be unsinkable.

WISCONSIN SYSTEM OF APPRENTICESHIP VERY SATISFACTORY

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Madison, Wis., March 11.—More than 1,776 apprentices are under contract in Wisconsin today, whereas in 1915 the number was less than 400. During that interim, under the stimulus of a state apprenticeship committee and a state supervisor of apprenticeship, a uniform apprenticeship contract was adopted and diplomas issued for graduating apprentices, while schedules for various trades have been established and rules adopted to govern apprentices.

The Wisconsin system has attracted wide attention outside the state and recently drew a page of editorial commendation in the "Domestic Engineering," which declared the efforts of the industrial commission of Wisconsin to elevate the efficiency of the factory, which the state will be gratified by the fact that the law binds apprentices to their employers for a period not less than one year and provides for their induration and their technical education while employed. Violation of the contract by either employer or employee is punishable by fine.

Stewart Schrimshaw, supervisor of apprentices, believes the law will develop a higher type of future mechanics to the state. The theory on which his work is based is that expressed by the trade paper editorial above mentioned, which said:

"It appears, according to labor statistics, that the industrial efficiency of the American workman has been retarded by the fact that below that of the European mechanic, unless employers recognize the necessity of establishing an effective apprenticeship system, which will guarantee the next generation adequate output of really skilled mechanics and technically trained men."

According to the strategists, strategy is a very simple thing—to understand. Its underlying principle is merely that of concentrating the maximum force on the front where the enemy's defense is weakest. In the most decisive results.

Unfortunately, however, an army not only has to be concentrated, but it also has to be fed, watered, clothed and furnished with arms and munitions. The all important question of where the big strategic concentration is to be made is therefore largely dependent upon which side possesses the richest and most lines of railways and communications with which to keep the army in fighting trim.

It is from this all-important point of view that Germany possesses an insurmountable advantage upon all the fronts except that of France.

Germany's strategic advantage is shown by the following comparisons:

From Lille to the Plate (for German troops), 700 miles; from Arras to the Plate (for French-English troops), 2,000 miles.

From Colmar to the Trentino (for Germans), 340 miles; from Belfort to the Trentino (for allied troops), 500 miles.

From Lille to Salonika (for the Germans), 1,350 miles; from Arras to Salonika (for the allies, partly by sea), 2,150 miles.

From Lille to Jerusalem front (for Germans), 2,700 miles; from Arras to Palestine front (for allies), 2,500 miles.

From Lille to Tigris front (for Germans), 4,940 miles; from Arras to Tigris front (for allies), 5,940 miles.

From Lille to Russian front (for Germans), 1,080 miles; from Arras to Russian front (now impossible for allies).

From Lille to Roumanian front (for Germans), 1,350 miles; from Lille to Roumanian front (now impossible for allies).

MILITARY LEADERS LOOK FOR DECISION ON THE WEST FRONT

With the French Armies, March 11.—European military authorities are now generally agreed that if a decisive battle is ever fought in the present war, it must be fought on the western front.

According to them, the front in France must ever remain the supremely important one until the very end of the war.

By a decisive battle is meant a defeat so great that the enemy's army is no longer capable of serious military effort.

In the present warfare of attrition, such a decision is a strategy, not a tactic. It is a result of superior strategy as from some long drawn-out contest like the battle of the Somme or that of Flanders in which the enemy's forces are gradually worn down till the breaking point is reached.

But even if the decisive battle comes in this manner, the strategists insist that it will only come on the front in France. If such be the case, American troops may yet have the opportunity of participating in the greatest and most important battle in the world.

Germany's central position, according to the strategists, give her advantages in the matter of strategy and tactics. Her communication that render it impossible for the allies successfully to meet her on any of the other fronts.

According to the strategists, strategy is a very simple thing—to understand. Its underlying principle is merely that of concentrating the maximum force on the front where the enemy's defense is weakest. In the most decisive results.

DEPENDENTS OF MEN NOW IN U. S. SERVICE TO RECEIVE CHECKS

Washington, March 11.—The last of the February pay checks, carrying money allotments by soldiers and sailors and government allowances to their dependents at home, went into the mails today. More than 500,000 checks have been written and an extraordinary effort has been made to have the dependents get their allowance early in the month.

The average amount of each check is about $25, and the total monthly disbursement runs about $12,000,000. Usually the allotment from the soldier's pay is about $16, and the government family allowance about $10, the exact amount being fixed by the number of dependents.

Three shifts of clerks have been at work. Acres of typists, 2,800 of them—24 hours of every day have clattered away on batteries of typewriters in several of the largest department stores in Washington—a command-declared dance hall above the municipal market, an abandoned hospital, and a factory building recently remodeled.

Regardless of the wholesale quantities of documents, each letter and each check is regarded as a distinct human document, on instructions of the director of the bureau, William C. Doolittle. Every woman typist and man sorting clerk has been impressed with the idea that the welfare of a soldier's family may depend on the speed, accuracy and personal interest shown by the bureau's workers.

So this is the task and the spirit of one of the government's greatest bureaus, the treasury department, in the close touch with the situation that no such demand was made upon Japan by the United States and that such demand would be considered "impugning" Japan's good faith.

The bureau expects to have checks for March remittances ready for mailing on the morning of April 1 and by that time much of the war has been built for preparing the checks will be scrapped. Machines will do the work better, it is expected, than man and women.

Speedy delivery of the checks is the long work desks in the center of a group of slower workers. This arrangement promotes group speed and better efficiency. The clerks are assigned to places between grilles, for the bureau management believes blondes are more nervous than brunettes and the brunettes provide a steadying influence.

Each check is typed individually, and a government law provides that checks almost must be signed individually rather than stamped mechanically. The signing is a big task. Signature duplicating machines are used, but checks being signed by each original signature of a pay clerk.

Yet with all the efficiency methods of the big office, it must shortly go into the discard before the automatic check writing machines now being perfected by E. M. Bailey, the chief disbursing clerk. These machines, by a single operation, will stamp the check with the name of the payee, the address, the name of the soldier, his organization sign and the serial number of the check.

In addition to this disbursement work, the bureau's life insurance business includes the receipt and classification of 40,000 applications daily from men in camps, for an aggregate of $300,000,000 of insurance. The total number of applications received up to the present time is about 2,000,000 and the total value of policies sought is more than $10,000,000,000.

Five Socialists Are Indicted; Plan To Fight For Freedom

Chicago, March 11.—Victor Berger, socialist candidate for the United States Senate in Wisconsin, is under federal indictment here with four other socialist leaders.

The indictment charges violation of the espionage act, Federal District Attorney Clynne said.

While the bill was returned an February 2, no announcement was made by Clynne until late Saturday.

Others under indictment with the Milwaukee socialist editor-politician are Adolph Gormer, J. Lewis Endahl, Irwin St. John Tucker and William F. Kruse.

In a formal statement in behalf of all five, Seymour Steadman, their counsel, declared: "They will prove themselves innocent."

"They are charged with conspiring to violate the espionage act in circulating attacks on war or military cause insubordination, disloyalty, refusal to do their duty in military and naval forces and obstructing enlistments."

Several official socialist documents, including the anti-war platform adopted in St. Louis last year, formed the basis of a forty-one page indictment.

Victor Berger spent Thursday in Madison and held a long conference with Governor E. W. Philipp, going over the Burke bill, which was signed that day, and getting the exact interpretation as to how far the bill goes on prohibiting the discussion of the war, especially as it pertains to enlistments in the army and naval forces.

It was evident from the attitude of the socialist leader that he wanted to go as far as the law would allow, and it was reported that he said to Madison to request the governor to modify the order he issued to the sheriffs of the state about the time Emil Seidel was arrested and convicted at Horicon.

SCHOOL DISTRICTS WILL BE ORGANIZED

Madison, Wis., March 11.—Every school district in Wisconsin is to have a community council of defense, if the plans of the State Council of Defense are carried out. Yesterday, when Magnus Swenson received an appeal from George F. Porter of the National Council of Defense urging this move in Wisconsin which is to be carried out in every state.

The creation of community councils organizes every district and community into a localized effort to back up every city and county council. The district council in turn will back up the state councils just as the state council are behind the Council of National Defense, thus welding the whole nation into one fighting unit.

The organization of these new local councils will be done through the State Council by County Councils of Defense and Wisconsin hopes to be able to report the state completely organized before any other state in the Union. Some of the problems which the community councils will undertake are:

Increased food production; increased sugar beet acreage; War gardens; increased production of live stock; food conservation; Enrollment of farm labor; sale of Liberty bonds; increased contributions to war contributions.

Oak, Japan, March 11.—According to a dispatch to the Nainpoh of this city from Washington, the United States is demanding a guarantee for the withdrawal of Japanese troops from Siberia immediately the crisis is over.

No Such Demand.

Washington, March 11.—It is authoritatively stated here today by officials in close touch with the situation that no such demand was made upon Japan by the United States and that such demand would be considered "impugning" Japan's good faith.

The bureau expects to have checks for March remittances ready for mailing on the morning of April 1 and by that time much of the war has been built for preparing the checks will be scrapped. Machines will do the work better, it is expected, than man and women.

AMERICANS DRIVE BACK HUN TROOPS

ELITE BEFORE DETERMINED ADVANCE OF INFANTRY AIDED BY MACHINE GUNS AND BARRAGE FIRE.

Some Prisoners Are Taken In Raid—Valuable Papers and Quantities of Materials Are Secured.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] With the American Army in France, March 11.—The two simultaneous raids were made after intense artillery preparation lasting for four hours, which the German posts were leveled. At midnight with small French forces on their flanks moved upon German artillery behind a creeping barrage, each on a front of 400 yards. When the Americans reached the enemy's first line the barrage was lifted so as to box in the German position at both ends. The American machine guns, which they blew up and also brought back large quantities of material and valuable papers.

While they were in the enemy line German artillery began a vigorous counter barrage. It was quickly silenced by American heavy and light artillery which hurled large quantities of gas shells. An American trench mortar battery participated in the artillery preparation preceding the raid and leveled the enemy's position. Soon after, the two raids the Americans staged another at a point further along the line and at the right they went over the top. After artillery preparation of forty-five minutes, in which the enemy position attack were obliterated. At this place the dugouts were found to have been constructed, partly by the enemy, and were accompanying the raiding party, completed the artillery work of destruction.

American Safe.

The raid was carried out skillfully and but for the fact the Germans fled more prisoners doubtless would have been taken. American gas shells were believed to have caused casualties among the enemy. No Americans are unaccounted for.

Huns Are Repulsed.

London, March 11.—A successful raid in which several prisoners were killed or wounded and two machine guns captured, was carried out by the British south of "St. Quentin," says an official statement from Field Marshal Haig today. The raid was made in the sector of our line northwest of La Bassée was driven off by artillery and machine gun fire. ICE PACK DAMAGES MANY BOAT-HOUSES

Two Are Completely Ruined While Others Suffer Damage From Ice-Cakes Driven by Staff Gale.

The boats driven by the staff gale Saturday caused considerable damage to boat-houses on the west side of the river just above the upper railroad bridge. Two of them were completely crushed while five others were driven partly ashore by the huge ice cakes which jammed in their sides. The wind-driven ice of last week caused the ice packs in the river north of the city to be released. Floating down the river Saturday, they were caught against the boat-houses and driven against the boat-houses on the west side of the river. The ice still remains packed about them, although it is not doing any more damage at present.

The boat-houses on the east side of the river fared much better than those located on the west side. Only one on that side of the river was damaged at all, the back of it being driven into shore, leaving the front and tipped downwards and frozen in the ice.

More damage is feared when the ice again floats down the river over the dam, one or two boat-houses will no doubt be carried away and others against the Fourth avenue bridge. The railroad trestle bridge below the dam is shaking now with the tremendous rush of water under it, and whether it will stand when the ice breaks remains to be seen. It has weathered scores of winters similar to the present one, however, and will no doubt stand up under the expected bombardment.

Clara Williams, who plays the lead in "The Whip," is a western girl and she had long experience in various other theatrical ventures before discovering that the movies were to bring her greatest success.

Miss Williams played in the stock company at Los Angeles after winning local reputation in amateur theatricals and continued for some time to play in stock, appearing with an occasional company on tour till she made her greatest reputation in the spoken drama at St. Paul in the play "The Awakening."

Her screen debut was made as a leading woman with William S. Hart in "The Bargain," after which she appeared with him in "Hell's Hinges." The screen was "The Criminal," a play written for her by Gardner Sullivan and her next play of importance was "The Paws of the Bear," in which she starred with William Desmond. A long list of successes has followed.

AMUSEMENTS

(Notices furnished by the theatres.)
MYERS THEATRE.
"So Long Letty," the musical comedy which comes to the Myers theater on Friday evening, March 15, is offered by Oliver Morosco, one of the most active theatrical producers in the country, which should be sufficient guarantee of the general excellence of the production. Mr. Morosco has given the stage some of its best plays of recent years, notably "The Bird of Paradise," "Pep of My Heart," "The Cinderella Man," "The Unchained Woman," Galsworthy's "The Fugitive," and many others. He has produced but three musical plays, "So Long Letty," which is to be shown here, "Canary Cottage," and "What Next," both of which have been equally successful.
The book for "So Long Letty"—and there is a considerable plot for a musical piece—is based on a farce, "The Neighbor's Wife," which was written by Elmer Harris, who collaborated with Mr. Morosco in making the musical version. The lyrics and music were provided by Earl Carroll.

These are the same men responsible for the other musical comedies. Mr. Morosco has assembled another of his "typical Morosco casts," and the chorus was brought east from California especially for this production.

Cap'n Warren's Wards

By JOSEPH C. LINCOLN.

"Why, Mrs. Dunn, you're excited to an alarm. Why, I never heard of such a thing. The fish is a lunatic, isn't he, Edwards?"

The butler shook his head. "I don't know, ma'am," he stammered. "I believe he is." Mrs. Dunn's presence of mind was returning and with it her courage. Her blood cheeks flamed a more vivid red, and her eyes snapped. "But, whether he is or not, he shall not trouble me."

She strode majestically to the door. The visitor was seated in the hall, calmly reading a newspaper. "What do you mean by this?" demanded the lady. "Who are you? If you have any business here state it at once."

The man glanced at her over his spectacles, rose and stood looking down at her. His expression was pleasant, and he was remarkably cool.

BAD BREATH

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Get at the Cause and Remove It

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, act gently on the bowels and positively do the work.

People afflicted with bad breath find quick relief through Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The pleasant, sugar-coated tablets are taken for bad breath by all who know them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act gently but firmly on the bowels and liver, stimulating them to natural action, clearing the blood and gently purifying the entire system. They do that which dangerous cathartics do without any of the bad after-effects.

All the benefits of nasty, sickening, gripping cathartics are derived from Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets without griping, pain or any disagreeable effects.

Dr. E. M. Edwards discovered the formula after seventeen years of practice among patients afflicted with bowel and liver complaint, with that attendant bad breath.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are purely a vegetable compound, mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color. Take one or two every night for a week and note the effect. 50c and 25c per box. All druggists.

"Yes, ma'am," he said gravely. "I'm glad to tell you who I am if you'd like to have me. I haven't made any mistake, have I? I understood your steward—the fellow with the brass buttons—to say that Abijah Warren's children lived here. That's so, isn't it? If not, then I am mistaken."

Mrs. Dunn regarded him with indignation. "You are," she said coldly. "The family of the late Mr. Rodgers Warren lives here. I presume the slight resemblance in names misled you. Edwards, show the gentleman out."

"Just one moment more, ma'am. It was Rodgers Warren's children I was looking for. A. Rodgers Warren he called himself, didn't he? Yes, well, the A stood for Abijah; that was his Christian name. And he left two children, Caroline and Stephen. Good! I thought for a jiffy I'd blundered in where I had no business, but it's all right you see, ma'am, I'm their uncle from South Denboro, Mass. My name is Elisha Warren."

Mrs. Dunn gasped. Edwards, peering over her shoulder, breathed heavily.

"You are—their uncle?" repeated the lady.

"Yes, ma'am. I'm Bije's brother. Oh, don't worry; it's all right. And don't fret yourself about me either. I'll set right down out here and read my paper and wait till Caroline or Stephen get home. They're expecting me. Mr. Graves, the lawyer, told 'em I was coming."

He calmly seated himself and adjusted his spectacles. Mrs. Dunn stepped back into the library and walked to the window. She beckoned with an agitated finger to the butler, who looked on.

"Edwards," she whispered, "did you hear what he said? Is it true?"

"I don't know, ma'am."

"Did Mr. Warren have a brother?"

"I didn't know that he had, ma'am."

"Do you—do you think it likely that he would have a brother like—like that?"

"I don't know, ma'am."

"Was Miss Caroline expecting him?"

"I don't know, ma'am. She—"

"Oh, you don't know anything! You're impossible, too, away!"

"Yes, ma'am," said Edwards thankfully, and went.

Mrs. Corcoran Dunn stood for some minutes by the window, thinking, or trying to think, a way to the truth of this astounding development. Finally she creakingly crossed the room and spoke.

"Mr. Warren," she said, "I feel guilty in keeping you out there. Won't you come in to the library?"

"Why, thank you, ma'am, I'm all right. Don't trouble about me. Go right on with your reading or sewing or knitting or whatever you was doing and—"

"So you are the late Mr. Warren's brother?" asked the lady, making her first lead in the game.

"Yes, ma'am. His older brother. Bije was ten years younger'n I am, Mrs.—er—"

"Dunn. I am an old friend of the family."

"That's good. I'm glad to hear they've got friends. When you're in sickness or trouble or sorrow, friendship counts for considerable. How are the young folks—Caroline and Stephen—pretty smart, hey?"

"Smart? Why, they are intelligent, naturally. I—"

"No, no. I mean are they pretty well?"

"Very well, indeed, considering the shock of their recent bereavement."

"Yes, yes. Of course. And they've moved, too. Morin's an awful fop. They say three movin's are as bad as a fire, but I calculate I'd rather burn up a set of carpets than pull 'em up, specially if they was insured. 'Tain't half so much strain on your religion. I remember the last time we took up our carpets at home. Abbie—she's my second cousin. Keopin' house for me—said I gettin' down on my knees has that effect on me she'd never ask me to go to prayer meetin' again. Ho, ho."

He chuckled. Mrs. Dunn elevated her nose and looked out of the window. Then she led another small triumph.

"You say that Miss Caroline and her brother expect you," she said. "You surprise me. Are you sure?"

"Oh, yes, ma'am. I'm sure. When Mr. Graves came down to see me, last week 'twas, I told him to say I'd be up pretty soon to look the ground over. This is a pretty fine place the young folks have got here," he added, gazing admiringly at the paintings and bookcases.

"Yes," assented the lady condescendingly. "For an apartment it is really quite livable."

"Mr. Graves came to see you at your home, did he?"

"Yes, ma'am; at South Denboro. And he certainly did have a rough passage. No, no; I'm sorry you heard about it, but he's so friendly with the family."

"Ahem! Doubtless he would have mentioned it, but he has been ill. I hope Mr. Graves' errand was successful."

"Well, sort of so so."

"Yes. He came to see you in connection with your brother's estate—some legacy perhaps?"

She did not look at the captain when she asked this question. Therefore she did not notice the glance which he gave her.

"Um-hm. Somethin' of that kind, Mrs. Dunn. I can't help thinkin'," he went on, "how nice it is that Caroline and Steve have such a good friend as you to help 'em. Your husband and Bije was chums, I s'pose?"

"No, not exactly. The friendship was on my side of the family."

"So? Want to know. Your husband dead, ma'am?"

"Yes," she answered shortly. "It looks as if it might snow, doesn't it?" she said, changing the subject.

"I shouldn't wonder. Have you any children, ma'am?"

"One—a son." The widow's tone was frigid.

"So? He must be a comfort to you. I s'pose likely he's a friend of my nephew and niece too?"

"Certainly."

There came the sound of laughter from the passage outside. The hall door opened. A moment later Caroline, followed by her brother and young Dunn, entered the library.

"Oh, Mrs. Dunn!" Caroline cried. "I'm so glad I accepted your—Malcolm's—invitation. We had a glorious ride! I—"

She stopped short. Captain Warren had risen from his chair and was facing her. Mrs. Dunn also rose.

"Caroline," she said nervously. "This—this is the word—'gentleman' is here to see you. He says he is—"

The captain interrupted her. Stepping forward, he seized his niece's hands in his. "Well, well!" he exclaimed admiringly. "Bije's girl, that

"Will you wish to go to your room at once, sir?" he asked.

"Why, I guess I might as well, comin' home," answered Captain Elisha, smiling. "Little soap and water won't do no harm. Fact is, I feel's if 'twas a prescription to be recommended. You needn't tote that valise, though," he added. "Tain't heavy, and I've lugged it so far already sence I got off the car that I feel kind of lonesome without it."

The butler, not knowing exactly how to answer, grinned sheepishly. Captain Elisha turned to Mrs. Dunn and her son.

"Well, good afternoon, ma'am," he said. "I'm real glad to have made your acquaintance. Yours, too, sir," with a nod toward Malcolm. "Your mother told me what a friend of the young folks you was and, as I'm sort of a pilot for 'em just now, in a way of speakin', my friend of theirs ought to be a friend of mine. Hope to see you often, Mr. Dunn."

The young man addressed smiled, with amusement not at all concealed, and languidly admitted that he was "charmed."

When the captain finally departed, preceded by Edwards and the suit case, Stephen Warren threw himself violently into a chair by the window. Young Dunn laughed aloud. His mother flashed an indignant glance at him and then hurried to Caroline.

"You poor dear!" she exclaimed, putting an arm about the girl's shoulder. "Don't mind us, please don't. Malcolm and I understand—that is, we know how you feel and—"

"Oh, but you don't know, Mrs. Dunn," cried Caroline, almost in tears. "You don't understand. It's so much worse than you think. I—I— Oh, why did father do it? How could he be so inconsiderate?"

"There, there!" purred the friend of the family. "You mustn't, you know. You really mustn't. Who is this man? This uncle? Where does he come from? Why does he force himself upon you in this way? I didn't know your poor father had a brother."

"Well, well!" he exclaimed admiringly. "Bije's girl!"

I ain't sence since you was a little mite of a baby! Caroline, I'm your Uncle Elisha!"

"Good Lord!" groaned Stephen Warren.

CHAPTER IV. A Little Business Talk.

IF the captain heard Stephen's fervent ejaculation he paid no attention to it. Dropping his niece's hand, he extended his own toward his nephew.

"And this is Stephen?" he said. "Well, Steve, you and me have never met afore, I b'lieve. But that's our misfortune, not our fault, hey? How are you—pretty smart?"

The boy's face was flaming. He mumbled something to the effect that he was all right enough and turned away without accepting the proffered hand. Captain Elisha glanced quickly at him, then at his sister.

"Well, Caroline," he said pleasantly. "I s'pose you've been expectin' me. Mr. Graves told you I was comin', didn't he?"

Miss Warren also was flushed with embarrassment and mortified surprise. "No," she stammered. "He has been ill."

"She, you don't say! So you didn't know I was comin' at all?"

"No. We—we have not heard from you since he returned."

"That's too bad. I hope I shan't put you out any, droppin' in on you this way. You mustn't treat me as a comin' play, you know. If 'taint convenient, if your spare room ain't ready so soon after movin', or anythin' of that kind, I can go to a hotel somewhere for a day or so. Hadn't I better, don't you think?"

Caroline hesitated. If only they might have been spared this public humiliation! If the Dunks had not been there! It was bad enough to have this dreadful country uncle come at all, but to have him come now, before they were prepared, before any explanations had been made! What should she do?

Her brother, fidgeting at her elbow, not daring to look at Malcolm Dunn, who he knew was thoroughly enjoying the scene, could stand it no longer.

"Care," he snapped, "what are you waiting for? Don't you know that the rooms are not ready? Of course they're not! We're sorry and all that, but Graves didn't tell us, and we aren't prepared. Certainly he'll have to go to the hotel for—the present."

He ventured to raise his eyes and glare indignantly at the captain. Finding the latter looking intently at him he dropped them again and jammed his clenched fists into his pockets.

Captain Elisha pulled thoughtfully at his beard.

"Humph!" he grunted. "Humph! Then I call 'em maybe!" He took a step toward the door, stopped, turned back and said with calm decision: "I guess I'd better stay. You won't mind me, Caroline, you and Stephen. You mustn't. As I said, I ain't comin' for the present. I'm one of the family, your pa's brother, and I've come some considerable ways to see you two young folks and talk with you. I've come because your pa asked me to. I'm used to roughin' it, been to sea a good many 'vages, and if a feather bed ain't handy I can get my forty winks on the floor. So that's settled, and you mustn't have me on your conscience. That's sense, ain't it, Mrs. Dunn?"

Mrs. Corcoran Dunn did not deign a reply. Caroline answered for her.

"Very well," she said coldly. Stepping to the desk she rang a bell. The butler appeared in the doorway.

"Edwards," said Miss Warren, "this gentleman," indicating the captain, "is to be our guest for the present. You may show him to his room—the blue room, I think. If it is not ready see that it is made so."

"Yes, Miss Caroline," replied Edwards. Retiring to the hall, he returned with the suit case.

"Will you wish to go to your room at once, sir?" he asked.

"Why, I guess I might as well, comin' home," answered Captain Elisha, smiling. "Little soap and water won't do no harm. Fact is, I feel's if 'twas a prescription to be recommended. You needn't tote that valise, though," he added. "Tain't heavy, and I've lugged it so far already sence I got off the car that I feel kind of lonesome without it."

Dinner Stories

The children in the first grade were asked to write a composition, choosing their own subject. This was little Jimmy's piece:

"A chicken is a very large bird. It can't fly because it has so many feathers. It has three toes pointing to the east and one to the west. It has a point on its face which it eats with."

Mamma—O, Bertie, here you are again all covered with mud from head to foot.

Bertie (in tears)—It isn't my fault. I was sailing on a plank, when Willie Meigs gave me a push, and over I went.

Mamma—Well, what are you crying about? Is it painful to be covered with mud?

Bertie—No, it ain't; but I thought that if I came in laughing you would whip me.

"My dear," said the banker to his only daughter, "I have noticed a young man in the drawing room two or three evenings each week of late. What is his occupation?"

"He is at present unemployed," replied the fair girl, a dreamy far-away look in her big blue eyes, "but he is thinking seriously of accepting a position of life companion to a young lady of means."

"When you were in musical comedy you were known as Miss Tonsils. Now you're in grand opera you are Madame Tonsils. How's that?" quizzed the new interviewer.

"It's this way," said the explanation. "I was wedded to my art. Then I merely had a husband to support."

Local druggists report a great deal of interest, especially among mothers with small children, in the remarkable external "vapor" treatment, known as Vio's Vapokub, recently introduced here from the South.

This treatment makes unnecessary "dosing" with injurious medicines, using fannel jackets and chest tectors, or keeping the children shut up indoors.

The body heat releases medicinal vapors that are inhaled with every breath, all night long, through the air passages to the lungs. These vapors loosen the phlegm and clear the air passages.

In cases of very severe chest colds or incipient pneumonia, first apply hot towels over the throat and chest to open the pores. Vapokub is then absorbed through and stimulates the skin, taking out that tightness and soreness in the chest.

Ask your druggist about the 30 days' trial offer.
